Abstract of the Disclosure

The illuminating light transmitted by the light guide inserted through the elongate inserted section is projected out of the distal end surface of the inserted through section. The illuminated objects pass the objective lens systems respective pupils of the two arranged in parallel within the distal end section of the inserted section and their images are formed on the focal The respective images are transmitted to the surface. The rear side by one common relay lens system. transmitted final images are formed respectively on the image taking surfaces of the image taking devices. The respective images photoelectrically converted by the taking devices are processed be respective image signals, are displayed in the monitor and are stereo-inspected through shutter spectacles.